

Ty Jessup

Ty Jessup, a native of Wilbur, WA, is the Export Industry Representative on the Washington Grain Commission. He is currently grain merchandiser for CLD Pacific in Portland, a post he has held through three transfers and a dozen years.

Ty grew up on a cattle ranch and worked for local wheat farmers before leaving for Washington State University. There, he received his undergraduate degree in agribusiness. During his career, Ty has worked in the petroleum industry and as an agronomist. His primary responsibility at CLD is to buy and sell grain and other commodities for export.

Ty is 36 years old, has a wife and two children and lives in Battle Ground, WA. His goal on the WGC is to “bring an export market perspective to Washington Wheat Growers.”
